

Overview for Students

As a current or former student, the information contained in your education records at UConn is protected by a Federal privacy law known as the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA). Under FERPA, you have certain rights related to your education records, including the right to have access to your own education records, and the right to have control over the disclosure of personally identifiable information from your education records (except in certain circumstances specified in the FERPA regulations). FERPA also requires University faculty, staff, vendors and affiliates (otherwise known as “school officials”) to protect your education records and the information contained in those records, and to only share the contents of those records in accordance with FERPA’s requirements. Except under limited exceptions specified in FERPA, school officials can only share your education records or discuss your records with your “prior written consent”—that is, your explicit permission in writing.

There may be times when students want to share certain records with someone outside the University or have that person contact a University office to discuss some aspect of their education records or information contained in your education records. This page provides you with information on the various ways students can provide the University with the documentation it needs to share certain records or discuss their contents where prior written consent is required.

Navigating Prior Written Consent at UConn

At UConn, students may provide direct access to certain portions of the education records. Students also have the ability to provide permission for certain offices at UConn to discuss records held or managed by that office and/or services provided to the student through that office. Different processes are required for each of these options.

Access to View Student Records

Certain student records can be viewed electronically by individuals for whom a student has set up an account, designating that person as a “Delegate” who may access certain screens or content. These records fall into three (3) main categories: academic/registrar, financial/bursar and financial aid.

Delegated Access

The Delegated Access feature of the Student Administration System provides students with the option to provide access to view certain screens in their PeopleSoft account to whomever they choose (for example: your parent, spouse, employer). This allows the person to whom they choose to give this access (their “Delegate”) the ability to see certain screens in the Student Administration System that the Student selects for them to view.

By setting up delegated access, you are giving your prior written consent required for school officials of the University of Connecticut to give the individual(s) you specify as Delegate(s), access to the information you have specified within the Student Administration System. Delegates will be able to view different screens of your information based what education records you have permitted them to access.

Please know that you are entitled to change, amend or rescind this permission at any time. In order to change this permission, simply visit the Delegated Access page and edit your delegates or the access they may have accordingly.

Please note that giving your Delegate(s) access to view certain screens in the Student Administration System does not also provide the required consent for the University offices that are the custodians of the contents of those screens for the University to answer questions from your Delegate(s). In order to provide the required consent for University offices to speak about the contents of those screens, please visit the FERPA Designee Pin Page {<https://hclleap-prod2.its.uconn.edu/apps/login/org/index.html>}.

Students can set up delegated access at <https://studentadmin.uconn.edu/>.

Disclosing or Sharing Other Records

In order for the University to disclose or provide access to other records beyond those housed in the Delegated Access system, a separate process must be followed. Students have two (2) options to provide their prior written consent:

1. The student may fill out and submit this Release Form to the office(s) that hold the records they would like shared.
2. If a student has a University-issued email account (e.g., _____@uconn.edu) the student may email University offices using that email account to request that specific education records be shared. In order to be valid, the email MUST be sent using the University-issued email account. The email must also contain the following:
 - Be signed and dated (this occurs automatically and electronically when the email is sent)
 - Specify the records that may be disclosed,
 - State the purpose of the disclosure, and
 - Identify the individuals or entities to whom the disclosure may be made.

Allowing for Discussions:
Granting Permission for University Staff to Discuss Certain Types of Student Information

FERPA Designee Pin Page

The University's FERPA Designee Pin Page allows students to grant permission to certain University staff to discuss certain types of information related to their education records or information contained in student records with individuals specifically designated by the student. Students may log into the FERPA Designee Pin Page to designate anyone – (e.g., a parent, a guardian, a significant other, employer) to grant permission for University staff to discuss the categories of information listed below. The individual a student designates is called the student's "FERPA Designee." Students will enter the following information into the FERPA Designee Pin Page for each person they choose to designate 1) proper name (first and last name) of the designee 2) assign each designee a 4-digit pass code 3) select what categories of information they give permission for University staff to discuss.

After the FERPA Designee Pin Page is completed, students should make sure that each designee knows their 4-digit pin code and what categories of information they have granted permission for University staff to discuss. When a designee contacts an office they will be asked to provide their name and their 4-digit pin code. Names and pass codes must match what is listed on the FERPA Designee Pin Page in order for University staff to discuss information specific to a student's education record.

The FERPA Designee Pin Page may not be used to disclose copies of education records. The FERPA Designee Pin Page only covers discussions regarding student information, not the disclosure of the records themselves. For information regarding the process to disclose copies of student records, please see the section regarding "Disclosing or Sharing Other Records" above.

It is important to note that the FERPA Designee Pin Page does not cover every topic of discussion. Nor does it cover discussions with all University employees about a student. Offices not listed above may require that a student follow the process described in the "Disclosing or Sharing Other Records" section above before discussing any matter about a student. Further University staff may determine when additional consent of the Student is required. In such cases, University staff may require that the processes outlined in the "Disclosing or Sharing Other Records" section above be followed before discussions regarding a student may occur.

Additionally, please note the FERPA Pin Page DOES NOT apply to discussions with faculty. Discussions with faculty should also utilize the process outlined in the “Disclosing or Sharing Other Records” section above.
